International Journal of Computer Auditing

Special Issue:

New Teaching Methods and Cases for Data

Analytic in Business Education

The International Journal of Computer Auditing is the journal of the International Computer Auditing Education Association. The journal aims to provide a multidisciplinary platform for the advancement of knowledge in the areas of computer auditing. At the end of 2021, the journal will publish a theme issue entitled “New Teaching Methods and Cases for Data Analytic in Business Education”.

The American Institute of Accountants (AICPA) and the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) have established a joint working group to carry out a larger "CPA Evolution" project and both mainly discuss accountant examination in response to rapid development of technology, audit analysis and process automation these years. Due to the new CPA exam revisions focus on Tech and Critical Thinking, the high demand of data analytics skills for accounting major students, universities are under the pressure to help students better prepare for the ever changing accounting profession.

The special issue invites high-quality submissions of research papers on topics related to the future computer auditing education. We consider all types of manuscripts (e.g., original and review papers, teaching methods, teaching cases, technical reports, adoption, case studies, and etc.) and different methodologies. Submissions are encouraged from a broad range of topics, including, but not limited to:
